Name of creator(s): Eleanor Andrews

Administrative/Biographical History:

Eleanor Louise Andrews (née Poole) was born April 12, 1944 in Los Angeles, California to Jimmie Williams and Muriel Williams Poole. She grew up in the Compton neighborhood and graduated from Compton Senior High School in 1962. She completed courses at California State University, Los Angeles before she married Franklin Andrews and gave birth to her son, Franklin Andrews, Jr. and her daughter, Marti Andrews. In 1965, she traveled to Fairbanks, Alaska to visit her biological father and decided to move there with her family. They lived in Fairbanks for three years before moving to Anchorage in 1968 where Andrews began working as a counselor at McLoughlin Youth Center for the State of Alaska. During her career, she also worked for the Alaska Public Employees Association, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and served as the Director of Human Resources for the Municipality of Anchorage. In 1982 she was appointed to work for the State of Alaska as a deputy and then commissioner of the Alaska Department of Administration. In 1987, she moved from the public to the private sector when she started her own business, the Andrews Group. The Andrews Group was a management services company, which engaged primarily in U.S. government service contracting in Alaska and across the United States. The company started with only Andrews and grew to employ thousands as an award winning business for its excellence and support of the community. Throughout her career, Andrews assisted numerous women-owned and Indigenous-owned businesses with guidance and partnerships to bid and fulfill federal government service contracts through what became the 8(a) procurement program of the government's Small Business Administration. Andrews retired in 2007, but she continues to be actively involved in her community and to give back to Alaska.¹²

Andrews built her life and career in Anchorage, working in both the public and private sectors while serving and investing her time and knowledge to organizations she believes in. She served on the Alaska Judicial Council from 2001 to 2007 where she gave her time to review and deliberate the application of all judges applying to serve in the Alaska court system. She has also served on boards that initiated the Foraker Group, the ATHENA program of the Anchorage Chamber of Commerce, and the Anchorage Urban League. Andrews raised and contributed funds for organizations in order to build the Dr. Etheldra Davis Fairview Elementary school, to strengthen the Anchorage Neighborhood Health Clinic, and develop affordable housing programs in the state. Additionally, Andrews has served on advisory boards for the University of Alaska Anchorage, Providence Alaska Foundation, and Commonwealth North, the Anchorage Parks Foundation Board, and the Providence Alaska Region Ministry Board.³

Andrews is regarded as a successful Black businesswoman and civic entrepreneur, who is a person who inspires institutions, businesses, and individuals to excel in their work and at the same time to invest in the community. She leads others in the understanding that it is good business to develop quality schools, affordable housing, accessible economic opportunities, safe neighborhoods, and a just and fair city and state. She has given her own time, money, and talents for decades, but has also inspired others to participate in advancing our communities. She is a gifted and fair public servant, a volunteer, a philanthropist, a mentor, a board member, a loyal friend, and a loving mother and grandmother. Andrews credits Alaska with providing opportunities for women and "anyone with curiosity" to succeed.
