Administrative/Biographical History:

Vern Brickley (1909-1970) came to Valdez, Alaska from Tacoma, Washington, in 1936 not as a photographer, but to work on a movie set. He lived through one winter on Fox Island in Prince William Sound, where he was involved in the herring fishery and raising foxes. Just prior to WWII he moved to Fairbanks, then was drafted into the Army as a photographer, and moved to Anchorage in 1940. He was in the Army at Fort Richardson for about three years, and discharged in 1945. He traveled throughout the Aleutians during the Japanese invasion, and many of the photographs of Attu from the campaign bear his name. It is thought that he traded for some of these images, since he was printing them commercially.

Until 1954 he and his family lived in Anchorage at 920 B East 15th Avenue. He is listed continuously in the phone book until April, but no business is listed in the yellow pages. At that time the family moved to Moose Pass, and Brickley worked at the military rehab center in Seward, teaching dark room techniques. According to his son Bill, this is when he picked up the historical negatives of Seward. They moved back to Anchorage in 1958, and Brickley then became a photographer for the Army Corps of Engineers, working for the District Engineers at Elmendorf Air Force Base. Many of the Corp photographs of the 1964 earthquake are his work. He died October 28, 1970, survived at the time by his widow, Margaret; a son, William; two daughters, Mrs. Don Parker, and Miss Eileen Brickley.

Donated by Brickley Family. Mrs. Brickley retained the negative collection through her lifetime, and died June 8, 1996.

Processing Notes

Negatives are given the accession number B1998.014.1.x

Prints from negatives are given the same number as the negative.

Glass Slides are given the accession number B1998.014.2.x

Slides were to be given the accession number B1998.014.3.x

Transparencies were to be given the accession number B1998.014.4.x

Prints without corresponding negatives are given the accession number B1998.014.5.x

Film rolls were to be given the accession number B1998.014.6.x

Nitrate negatives and film need to be separated to freezer.

The collection also contains:

Three boxes with unnumbered slide negatives. These are not yet properly rehoused.

One box (for 5x7 negatives) of prints found within the numbered negatives. They are rehoused and assigned numbers based on the negatives they correspond to.

One box (for 5x7 negatives) of prints found within the numbered negatives. They are rehoused, but not assigned numbers, as they did not correspond to any of the negatives they were found with.

One box (5x7 envelope negative box) of miscellaneous items, such as notes, found in with the negatives.

One slide box with 2 rows of unnumbered slides.

Three large boxes of prints. These have not been numbered, or rehoused. The third of these boxes contains Brickley's Alphanumeric index. The back of this index lists car costs, house records, charges & credits at stores, salary and earnings statements and lists, other income; also loose leaf notes (with headings such as "Thawing out the Eskimos", "Mush, you Malamutes", "Old Yukon", and "Road to Alaska") a "Memoranda" address book; "What is Propaganda" War department manual from 1944; and a personal letter from Eugene Tetinek in 1970. It also contains Brickley's photography permits, badge, passes, drivers license, officers club card, business card of Yank magazine, registration certificate; souvenirs from Yellowstone NP.

Two large loose envelopes contain prints (unnumbered) as well as transparencies, and an application for civilian employment.

The following items have been masked for sensitive and/or restricted content: .1.1690
