Service Civilian Conservation Corp². He had also spent eight years at Kenai Lake Station where he filled a variety of positions, but most often that of Fire Warden.

On April 9, 1942, the Hanson's second daughter, Telva, was born in Seattle. Shortly after, Bertha died on April 12, 1942, and was buried in Seattle. Ted remarried shortly after and later died in Washington on July 8, 1983³.

Scope and Content Description:

The collection is comprised of three spiral-bound family photograph scrapbook albums compiled by Bertha while living in Alaska. The albums contain primarily black and white photo prints (many hand-tinted), as well as postcards, various ephemera, typed narrative pages, and newspaper and magazine clippings.

Depicted are Haynes Hanson family and friends, wildlife, landscapes, travels, and the communities where Ted worked in Southcentral and Southeast Alaska.

The typed narrative pages cover a range of topics, including life events, information about Alaskan animals, and descriptions of landscapes and places.

Arrangement: Original order maintained.
